As previously reported, on April 14, 2009, the Company approved workforce reductions in its Singaporean operations, which are part of its Manipulator and Docking Hardware product segment. In connection with this workforce reduction, Management determined to suspend manufacturing operations at the Singapore facility and to transfer manufacturing of the docking hardware products that had been manufactured in Singapore to Cherry Hill, New Jersey. The Company expects the suspension of manufacturing in Singapore to be completed by June 30, 2009. The Company does not expect to incur any significant costs in connection with the suspension of manufacturing operations in Singapore.

Also as previously reported, on April 27, 2009, the Company approved the transfer of its Tester Interface product segment operations, currently located in San Jose, California, to Cherry Hill, New Jersey. The Company also reported that in connection with the transfer of operations, thirteen staff would be terminated. Subsequently, Management determined that it would not be beneficial to transfer the Tester Interface operations from San Jose to Cherry Hill, and two of the thirteen staff would not be terminated. As a result of this change, the workforce reductions that were completed in the Tester Interface product segment in April and May 2009 represented 61% of the employees in this segment and one-time termination benefits incurred by the Company were approximately $76,500, rather than 72% and $101,677, respectively, as previously reported.

As a result of the changes made in the Tester Interface product segment workforce reductions above, the Company currently expects that the restructuring actions taken in April and May in Singapore, San Jose and Japan (as previously reported) will reduce its annual operating expenses by approximately $1.3 million, rather than $1.5 million as previously reported.
